“ I will always remember when we first met..It was DOT day weekend, I was so excited to meet both my brother and farther for the first time. I cannot even begin to explain the feeling of happiness that I was feeling. I was connected to a piece of me that was missing. You were such a goofball, When we all had to leave and we took a group picture all I could hear was, "Liam .. stop pulling my hair!", as you pulled Katie's hair while taking the picture .. oh yeah .. I knew I had a baby brother. We may not have been in each others life long, but know that you made a great impact on mine. I will never forget you bro, you will always be in my heart and prayers. Its never good bye, always see you later .. so ... see you later Liam. I know you will be watching over all your loved ones with our father and our cousin Kaite... God has a new angel now ..

Love forever and always,
~ A. O'Connor ~

“ We may not have been life long friends but we shared a lot of time and good memories together on the gridiron. I dont know a lot about your time after high school but I hear you were a good man and a better father. The people's lives you touched were better for having known you and we're all a little worse for having lost you. Rest In Peace Brother.

“ I remember back in the neighborhood when Austin and Liam would come down to the shop. Always put smile on my face. They would sweep up around the shop for me then we would share a cold bottled coke out of the vintage coke machine. Those boys made me proud...

“ The day you walked off that plane in Logan Airport filled my heart with so much joy, from that day forward it was like we were never apart. You were filled with so much love and laughter, you were bigger than life, you had so much to offer but for some reasons, that only you carried deep inside, you did not feel what we saw. No matter what I was always proud of you, the nephew you were, the father you were, the cousin you were the son that you were. You are now at peace in a far better place than we are. You can now rest in eternal peace with your dad and Katie and watch over the rest of us. Until we meet again my handsome nephew, I will cherish and hold every memory we made deep in my heart always.

*Love you always and forever
